Bridge Travel Increases in 1951

Percentage Gain Is 9.22 Over 1950—Carry 353,365 Autos

Travel over bridges under control of the New York State Bridge Authority last month was 9.22 per cent above that of December, 1950, the local office of the authority reported today.

The three Hudson river bridges clocked 353,365 vehicles last month and 323,544 in December, 1950, a gain of 29,821 vehicles.

The Bear Mountain bridge led for the month with a percentage gain of 13.09 per cent. It clocked 66,804 vehicles which was 7,733 ahead of the 59,071 in December, 1950.

A gain of 8.54 per cent was next highest and was clocked by the Rip Van Winkle bridge which carried 68,922 vehicles last month and 63,498 in December, 1950, a gain of 5,424 vehicles.

The Mid-Hudson Bridge clocked 217,639 vehicles this year and 200,973 in December, 1950 for a gain of 16,664 vehicles or 8.29 per cent.

The Kingston-Rhinecliff ferry which stopped a week earlier this year carried 2,224 vehicles in December this year and 2,973 a year ago for a loss of 749. It carried 827 pedestrians this year and 1,299 a year ago for a decrease of 472. The ferry ran until Dec. 26 in December, 1950 and quit December 19 in 1951.

School Boards Back Proposal of Regents

Albany, Jan. 7 (AP)—Directors of the New York State School Boards Association support the Board of Regents' proposal that schools open each day with a prayer.

The board of directors, in a resolution adopted at its semi-annual meeting Saturday, urged association members to consider following the Regents' suggestion in their school systems.

A total of 812 school boards, 98 per cent of the boards in the state, belong to the association.

The Board of Regents, governing body of the state's educational system, proposed the daily prayer in a declaration last Nov. 30. The prayer suggested by the Regents:

"Almighty God, we acknowledge our dependence upon Thee, and we beg Thy blessings upon us, our parents, our teachers and our country."

Many boards have adopted the proposal.

After excuses had been exercised this morning in Supreme Court there were only 17 grand jurors remaining who were able to serve. Justice Schirck excused the grand jurors until 10 a.m. Tuesday and ordered an extra panel of six grand jurors drawn for attendance Tuesday. Of the panel of 36 trial jurors, 29 were left after excuses had been heard. An extra panel of trial jurors also will be summoned. The trial jurors remaining were excused until 2 p.m. today when a new calendar will be made up and trial work begun.

Is Still Serious

The condition of Ernest Delaney of Rte. 1, Ulster Park, is "still serious," Kingston Hospital authorities reported this morning. Delaney was admitted to the hospital Thursday afternoon suffering from a gunshot wound in the chest, the sheriff's office reported.

Two Senators Praise Plan To Keep Civilian Production

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—An administration decision to keep up the flow of most civilian goods while gradually expanding defense production drew praise from two key senators today.

Mobilization Director Charles E. Wilson outlined the "guns-within-the-wall" approach in his quarterly report on defense production.

Wilson has been under heavy fire from both sides recently.

The Senate Preparedness Subcommittee protested that defense production was far short of its goals and called for tightening the belt on civilian output.

On the other side, the automobile industry and other civilian producers have made vigorous protests against sharp cuts in

Congress Is To Convene At Capitol

Polities Are Expected to Weigh Heavily in Decisions; House Seats Are at Stake
To Get Messages

Truman Will Forward Three Statements Vital to Nation

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—The 82nd Congress starts its election-year session tomorrow, with polities likely to weigh heavily in all major actions.

The next six months are expected to bring forth decisions, one way or the other, on such major matters as universal military training, foreign military and economic aid, economic controls at home, and defense spending.

Leaders are hopeful the session can wind up in time for the July political conventions so members can go home afterward for the fall campaigns.

All House seats will be at stake in the November voting. So will 32 Senate seats, as well as the presidency and the vice-presidency.

Because of the approaching elections, observers generally expect the session to be marked more by talk than by action.

President Truman will blueprint his legislative program in his State-of-the-Union message Wednesday. That will be followed by two more messages, one on economics and the other transmitting a federal budget expected to exceed $80 billion dollars for the year starting July 1.

Renewal Expected

The President is expected to renew his request for many of the things he has sought, and failed to get, in the past. Among those are civil rights legislation, compulsory health insurance, and tougher wage, price and rent controls.

He may ask for more taxes, since Congress didn't give him as much as he wanted last year, but his chances of getting them are slim.

It isn't likely, either, that Congress will go along with the President on civil rights, or anti-discrimination legislation, or on compulsory health insurance.

It probably will approve an extension of the Defense Production Act which expires June 30, but the present outlook is that the President won't get what he wants in the line of wage, price and rent controls.

Investigations, providing heavy ammunition for political campaigns, will constitute a major legislative activity. Committee probers will delve into charges of graft in high places, scandals in tax law enforcement, waste of public money, and communism.

Inquiries started last year and to be continued this year already have provided Republicans with campaign slogans dealing with mink coats and home freezers to toss at the Democratic administration.

Expected to Ball

Underpass Parley Set for Thursday At Mayor's Office

Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk said today he will confer with officials in his office at 2 p.m. Thursday to determine if the Broadway underpass can be opened for the balance of the winter on a temporary basis.

J. S. Bixby, district engineer of the State Public Works Department, stationed at Poughkeepsie, and a representative of Lipset, Inc., the contractor, will attend the conference, the mayor said.

Last week the mayor conferred with state officials at Albany and with representatives of the contractor in New York to determine what can be done to open the underpass.

No one was reported injured as the roaring flames spread before a 34-mile-an-hour ocean wind.

Firemen said the blaze started about 6:30 a.m. in the Congress Hotel.

The Congress and Lorraine burned to the ground. The New Davis Hotel was gutted and nine houses were destroyed.

their supplies of materials being diverted to the defense effort.

Wilson told a news conference that the government had re-examined its entire mobilization policy in light of all criticism and decided again on the gradual type of buildup.

He said the National Security Council, headed by President Truman, had backed the decision.

Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.), chairman of the Joint Congressional Economic Committee, commented:

"The policy of seeking to organize the world for peace, while building the assembly line for use if war should be thrust upon us, is wise."

Reacto Fights Cancer

New York, Jan. 7 (AP)—The country's biggest peacetime atomic oven—the reactor at Brookhaven, N. Y.—is turning out radioactive isotopes to fight cancer and help in medical experiments.

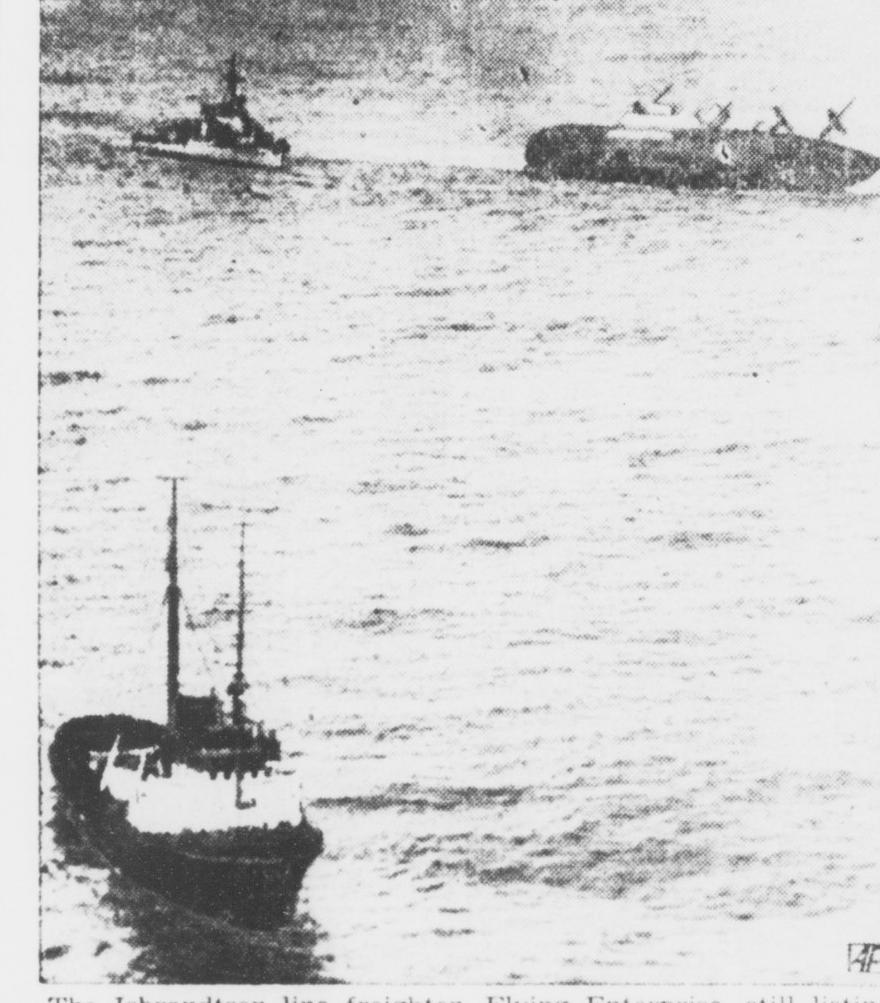

It was announced yesterday that the reactor, in operation about a year, has been producing its short-lived atoms for Boston and other places near to New York. But the reactor at Oak Ridge, Tenn., still makes most of the nation's supply of these atoms.

Admiral Cites Action in Building Plane Fields—Accuses Allies

Munsan, Korea, Jan. 7 (AP)—The United Nations' chief true negotiator said today there are growing indications that the Communists do not want a stable armistice in Korea.

Today's report from Panmunjom was the now familiar "no progress."

If the Communists "are acting in good faith and sincerely want peace, there can be no reason for them to construct military airfields during the period of an armistice," said Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy. He flew to Tokyo for conferences with Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, supreme allied commander.

If, on the other hand, the Communists are acting in bad faith and are, in fact, preparing for war, the construction of military airfields becomes, and is, a matter of great urgency to them," Joy added.

The Reds reiterated their insistence on the right to construct and repair airfields during a brief Monday meeting of the subcommittee on truce supervision.

Session Ends Abruptly

The session ended abruptly after Chinese Maj. Gen. Hsieh Fang accused the allies of "intentionally delaying the negotiations" and trying to wreck the true talks by insisting on prohibiting construction of military air bases.

Communist delegates again rejected a six-point allied plan for exchanging prisoners of war and civilians.

Read Adm. R. E. Libby promptly submitted the plan again, and again explained it in detail.

North Korean Maj. Gen. Lee Sang Cho listened to Libby's explanation then commented:

"No matter how eloquently you describe it, we cannot accept your proposal."

Both subcommittees will meet again at 11 a.m. Tuesday (9 p.m. EST, Monday).

Only Routine Matters

Admiral Joy told newsmen in Tokyo his conference with Ridgway would cover only routine matters.

"There is no change in true negotiations at Panmunjom to prompt this visit," he said.

"With each passing day there is less and less reason to think the Communists really want a stable armistice. Certainly, no one can accuse them of being in a hurry to demonstrate good faith."

In a statement handed to news:

152 Miles From Cornish Port

London, Jan. 7 (AP)—Unsinkable Capt. Kurt Carlsen and the Flying Enterprise were halfway to home today.

Firemen still poured water into the smouldering ruins more than 12 hours after the blaze, punctuated by three distinct explosions, as they awaited permission to search the debris.

Only a shell—four shaky walls remained today after the entire five floors collapsed into the basement of the building in a tangled mass of wreckage.

Fourteen persons were believed to have perished at first, but six later were accounted for.

Fifteen persons were injured, 13 serious enough to be kept at Noble Hospital. The other two were discharged after treatment.

Fire Chief Jeremiah Moriarty said the walls were in danger of collapsing at any time and that no one would be allowed to enter the ruins until an inspection by State Fire Marshall William J. Puzzo and Westfield Building Inspector Ralph Sizer has been completed.

Vishinsky Says Talks at Deadlock

Paris, Jan. 7 (AP)—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky said today the Korean true talks had reached a deadlock.

He urged a high level Security Council meeting to help break it.

Vishinsky told the United Nations political committee: "We want these negotiations to be concluded successfully and quickly" and said "Let's have a Security Council meeting, consisting of high-level persons, get together and try to help them."

He said the Soviet proposal would not break up the talks at the front but would merely consider ways of helping them out of the rut "in which they have been floundering for six months."

There were Eisenhower—formally in the race—Gov. Earl Warren of California and Harold Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania and former governor of Minnesota.

Another practical effect of today's statement was to pull the rug from under those Democrats who have been beating the drums for the nomination of Eisenhower by their party.

One New Hampshire group had planned to enter Ike's name in the Democratic primary.

No Comment By Truman

At the White House, aides said President Truman had no comment on the general's statement.

Eisenhower's name has figured in presidential speculation ever since he led the allies to victory over the Axis power in Europe in 1945.

There were Eisenhower—formally in the race—in both major parties in 1948, despite his disavowal of political ambitions.

The booms persisted until he announced with complete finality that he would not accept such a nomination even if it were given to him.

A year after the election of President Truman the talk of Ike for the White House in 1952 had started again. And in December, 1949, Eisenhower—then president of Columbia University—declared:

"Frankly, I have no political angle, and I am not going to let any sort of talk by others make me a candidate."

But last November, after a group of Republicans started a new boom and some of them had conferred with Ike, he kept the door open. He said then:

"Now, if I have friends who have been my friends so long they believe they know how I would

Bridge Travel Increases in 1951

Travel over bridges under control of the New York State Bridge Authority last month was 9.22 per cent above that of December, 1950, the local office of the authority reported today.

Cause Not Determined

The cause of the blaze was not determined immediately.

As flames licked from top to bottom in one tower section of the St. Charles, one hundred guests in the Breakers Hotel, across New Jersey Ave., were ordered evacuated.

A two block area of smoldering ruins marked the path of the early morning fire.

Two 150-room frame hotels near the boardwalk were burned to the ground, another was gutted and nine rooming houses were destroyed.

The Globe Theatre on the boardwalk and an adjoining string of stores were damaged.

Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk said today he will confer with officials in his office at 2 p.m. Thursday to determine if the Broadway underpass can be opened for the balance of the winter on a temporary basis.

Conference Follows Plan Agreed Upon During Weekend Cruise on Potomac

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—President Truman and Prime Minister Churchill opened a detailed survey of world affairs today. Informants said the talks began with an inquiry into western defense problems.

Churchill appeared for his first White House visit of his current trip three minutes before 11 a.m. accompanied by Foreign Minister Anthony Eden and Sir Oliver Franks, British ambassador to the U.S.

Two dozen photographers and newsreel men turned their cameras on the 77-year-old British statesman as he stepped from a Rolls Royce.

Wearing his familiar black bowler hat and smoking one of his big Havana cigars, Churchill posed for a few minutes and then started into the White House door where he was greeted by William Simmons, White House receptionist.

Inquiries started last year and to be continued this year already have provided Republicans with campaign slogans dealing with mink coats and home freezers to toss at the Democratic administration.

Expected to Bark

Working under the general control of a combination of Republicans and southern Democrats, Congress is expected to balk not only at the President's domestic program, but also to rear back on some foreign policies.

There is strong sentiment for a sharp curtailment of foreign military and economic aid. Many legislators who went abroad during the fall and winter months returned with the impression that foreign countries receiving U.S. help aren't carrying their full share of the rearmament and recovery load. Others want more emphasis on aid for the Far East.

Just how much the President will request for foreign aid of all types is not known. Last year he asked for $1.2 billion dollars and Congress cut that by more than one billion. Proportionately, bigger slash appears likely this year.

Took Zig-Zag Course

Heavier weather earlier had forced the tug to take a zig-zag course to ease the strain on the tow.

The battered Flying Enterprise today was almost flat on her port side, but still "being towed well." The Turmoil's radio operator said in a radio telephone call to the Associated Press. He reported Capt. Carlsen "more confident than ever" that his battered ship would reach a safe harbor.

The radio operator said if the weather gets worse, the Turmoil's Capt. Dan Parker will abandon Falmouth as his goal and make for any port possible, probably the Scilly Isles.

Bonn, Germany, Jan. 7 (AP)—Western officials today said the Germans have agreed to continue paying part of the bill for western troops in Germany, even after a peace settlement is signed with the Allies.

The United States, Britain and France probably will promise in return to reduce this German financial outlay when German troops actually take the field as part of the six-nation European army, the officials added. That is expected to be at least a year.

Allied officials disclosed yesterday that West German military leaders have completed secret plans for a draft army, conscripted on American lines, for their contribution to the European peace. The plans call for a maximum force of 12 divisions.

Along with the future reduction in German funds for the Allied troops, the three occupation powers also are expected then to free the Germans of levies for the support of the Big Three's diplomatic establishments—embassies and consulates—in the country.

Agreement by the Germans to share the cost of western troops on their soil after they win near-sovereignty clears away one of the major hurdles to a "peace contract" with the Allies.

Still unsettled is the question of how much the Germans will pay toward western defense, and

Also Reveals Position as Republican Voter; His Statement Read to Reporters

Won't Seek Relief

General Will Not Ask to Be Removed From Present Post

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower proclaimed himself a Republican today, and made it clear he would accept that party's presidential nomination if it is offered. But he said he won't actively seek it.

In a Paris statement, the 61-year-old general swept away much of the fog of uncertainty that has swirled for the last five years about his place in the picture of presidential possibilities.

His statement was prompted by the week-end move from Senator Lodge (R-Mass.) who announced (A) that Eisenhower's name would be entered in the March 11 New Hampshire presidential primary, and (B) that there would be a "finish fight" to win the GOP nomination for the general.

His Main Points

Eisenhower, who has been talked as both a Democratic and Republican presidential possibility, made these main points in his statement:

1. He said Lodge was correct in calling him a Republican.

2. He has no intention of asking that he be relieved of his present assignment as leader of the European defense forces.

3. He will not take part in pre-convention activities of those seeking the nomination for him.

Costly Machine Stolen; Is Found In Trash Basket

Local police were confronted today with a theft that appears to have been the work of a crank or a prankster with a warped sense of humor.

A blotter report at 7:05 a. m. said that William Tubby, 208 Broadway reported finding a Burroughs Comptometer in a public trash basket on the sidewalk in front of the city hall.

The machine was brought by Tubby to police headquarters where it was found that it had been taken from the office of Kingston Hospital and is valued at $700.

It was indicated at the hospital that the machine was still in the office when it closed at 10 p. m. yesterday, and that it apparently had been taken later last night or early today. Detective Clarence Brophy was notified after Lt. James P. Martin conferred with a hospital official this morning.

Harold Paradise, of 75 Franklin street, notified police at 9:10 p. m. Saturday that a ring valued at $150 was missing. Officers Raymond Wells and Kenneth Gaffney, investigated and said Paradise reported the ring missing after he had taken a taxi ride with another man.

New York, Jan. 7 (AP)—First Army Headquarters announced today that five more examining boards have been set up for applicants for army officer candidate schools. The new boards are at Fort Dix, N. Previously applicants had to go before boards at either Fort Jay or Fort Devens, Mass.

Two Senators

chairman of the Commerce Committee, said, "I like Wilson's approach to the problem of mobilization but I hope we will cut his 50 million dollar spending estimate by about 10 billions a year."

Wilson said he consistently has favored a top military outlay of about 50 billion dollars annually. He said he hoped the new government budget would be held to this.

The mobilization chief said the nation now is entering a period of "severest pinch" in allocation of critical materials and the pinch certainly will continue into 1953.

Even so, Wilson said defense leaders reaffirmed plans not to issue "death sentences" for less essential industries by cutting off all their copper, aluminum or other critical materials.

For the year just ended, Wilson claimed "tremendous" gains. His report listed:

1. In addition of more than one million persons to the armed forces and expansion of the air forces to 95 wings.

2. Trebling the rate of military construction and deliveries to a total of two billion dollars monthly. The report said some major military items had attained planned output and were being leveled off or cut back.

3. Expansion of basic aluminum and electric power production capacity by 10 per cent and that of steel by four per cent. Obligation of 45 billion dollars for procurement and building, for a cumulative total of 63 billion.

4. Laying foundations for a "much greater expansion" of both military and industrial output in the next two years.

"All of this has been done with relatively little dislocation of the civilian economy," Wilson reported.

Wilson said defense officials needed "stronger powers" for price and credit controls and warned against weakening the "battery of weapons against inflation" in a period when defense spending would continue to rise.

The existing Controls Law expires June 30 and the new session of Congress is expected to extend it.

The Globe Theatre on the Boardwalk, about 50 feet from the site of the first hotel fires, also was set ablaze and nearby boardwalk stores were threatened.

Fire companies from nearby Ventnor and Pleasantville joined Atlantic City firemen in the battle against the stubborn flames.

Quadruplets Born To Brooklyn Couple

New York, Jan. 7 (AP)—Quadruplets—three girls and a boy—were born today to Mrs. Fannie Gruber, 38, in Bushwick Hospital, Brooklyn.

The father, Joseph, 38, was surprised and overjoyed at the news. X-ray examinations had shown there would be multiple births, but did not disclose the number.

Gruber immediately began to study how the family could re-arrange their five-room apartment to accommodate the four new arrivals and the Grubers' three other children, Sheldon, five; Beverly, four, and Sandra, three.

"This is surprising," he said. "I don't know what to say. It's all new to me. What else do you want me to say? . . ."

Fruit Crops Decrease

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 7 (AP)—New York state's principal fruit crops dropped seven per cent in 1951 and their estimated total value fell 20 per cent, the State Agriculture Department said today.

Orchards and vineyards in the Empire State produced 591,000 tons of the main fruit crops, which had an estimated value of $22,588,000. While less than the large 1950 output, the total tonnage was 27 per cent more than the 10-year (1940-49) average. A total of 18,095,000 bushels of apples was grown last year. This compared with 18,700,000 in 1950. Peach production in 1951 totaled 1,312,000 bushels; pears, 1,024,000 bushels; sweet cherries, 6,000 bushels; sour cherries, 31,200 tons, and grapes, 62,400 tons.

Study to Be Made

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 7 (AP)—The State Forests and Waters Department will undertake a $350,000 study of ways and means of best utilizing the Delaware river and its resources. The study was authorized by a bill signed into law over the weekend by Gov. John S. Fine. It gives the department broad powers to investigate all means of controlling and improving conditions on the waterway. The department also was empowered under the act to join with the Incodel, a four-state compact, in pursuing ways to utilize the Delaware. The compact is between Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Delaware.

Celebration Is Opened

New York, Jan. 7 (AP)—The folks at First Presbyterian Church in Newton, Queens, won't soon forget the day they opened a year-long celebration of the church's 300th birthday. As the observance opened yesterday, the choir wore garb of the 1650's.

In colonial custom, men and women churchgoers were segregated. President Truman sent greetings. And the Rev. Dr. Howard A. Northacker, minister, disclosed that the church had turned down an offer of almost one million dollars for its site.

men, Joy emphasized that the primary responsibility of any military commander is the security of his forces, during an armistice as well as in war.

The debate at Panmunjom is not over an academic point," he declared. "The debate is over the extremely practical matter of life and death for our forces and those defend.

No Interference

"The issue is not 'interference in internal affairs' or 'infringement of sovereign rights,' as the Communists would like to have us believe. The issue is clearly and inescapably self-preservation. The stumbling block in the debate is no more and no less than a simple matter of good faith."

An official UN spokesman, Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckles, said Communist negotiators at Panmunjom appeared disinterested and lackadaisical, as though they were waiting for new instructions.

Hsieh, Col. Chang Chun-tsai and their interpreters giggled, snickered or read magazines while Maj. Gen. Howard M. Turner was restating the allied position on airfield construction, Nuckles said.

Allied negotiators "again insisted that the presence of crated combat aircraft in North Korea was even greater reason for the prohibition of any buildup of military airfields during an armistice," the official UN communiqué said.

Nuckles said that with crated fighter planes hidden in North Korea "the offer made by the Communists to prohibit the introduction of any combat aircraft to insure stability of an armistice is without substance."

Nuckles declined to estimate how many MiG fighters the Reds have brought across the Yalu in crates but he said the number was "considerably more than any taken force for display purposes."

More Holdups Anticipated

New York, Jan. 7 (AP)—The current crackdown on illegal narcotics suppliers may result in more drugstore holdups. James C. Ryan, New York district supervisor of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, predicted yesterday a wave of holdups and forged prescriptions. His reasoning: Narcotics users, their supply sources cut off, will resort to desperate means to get the drugs. He made his statement after a roundup of scores of narcotics sellers here over the weekend. Similar roundups were made elsewhere over the country.

The committee called him before it to tell what he knew about crime. He had been reputed as a king of the underworld and maker and breaker of politicians.

The cause was not determined immediately. There was no estimate of damage.

Two Senators

chairman of the Commerce Committee, said, "I like Wilson's approach to the problem of mobilization but I hope he will cut his 50 million dollar spending estimate by about 10 billions a year."

Wilson said he consistently has favored a top military outlay of about $50 billion dollars annually. He said he hoped the new government budget would be held to this.

The mobilization chief said the nation now is entering a period of "severest pinch" in allocation of critical materials and the pinch will continue into 1953.

Even so, Wilson said defense leaders reaffirmed plans not to issue "death sentences" for less essential industries by cutting off all their copper, aluminum or other critical materials.

For the year just ended, Wilson claimed "tremendous" gains. His report listed:

1. In addition of more than one million persons to the armed forces and expansion of the air force to 95 wings.

2. Trebling the rate of military construction and deliveries to a total of two billion dollars monthly. The report said some major military items had attained planned output and were being leveled off or cut back.

3. Expansion of basic aluminum and electric power production capacity by 10 per cent and that of steel by four per cent. Obligation of $5 billion dollars for procurement and building, for a cumulative total of $3 billion.

4. Laying foundations for a "much greater expansion" of both military and industrial output in the next two years.

"All of this has been done with relatively little dislocation of the civilian economy," Wilson reported.

Wilson said defense officials needed "stronger powers" for price and credit controls and warned against weakening the "battery of weapons against inflation" in a period when defense spending would continue to rise.

The existing Controls Law expires June 30 and the new session of Congress is expected to extend it.

POPULATION-VS.-FOOD PROBLEM

The free world and the Communist realm are battling on many fronts. Listening to utterances from leaders on both sides, you would almost inevitably conclude that the issues between them are deep and basic. To a very substantial degree they are, but there are also times when a man from Mars, viewing the cold war struggle with full objectivity, could not help but feel that the two great adversaries were grappling on a superficial level—dealing with symptoms rather than causes.

A review of the world's population statistics would be likely to put a celestial visitor in such a mood. Several European nations are groaning under the steadily greater weight of increased population. Asiatic countries, particularly India, continue to add to their teeming millions. Even the United States looks ahead to a sharply higher human total in the next two or three decades.

If statesmen were complete realists, the cold war would end tomorrow and in its place would begin a gigantic joint effort of East and West to solve this problem of overpopulation. For the swelling statistics are a matter of grave import. They are a cause, not a symptom. They bring in their train a thousand other difficulties.

A few years ago a controversial debate arose in the United States over this issue. William Vogt of the Pan-American Union in Washington dramatized the problem in a book called "The Road to Survival." It painted a gloomy picture of rising populations set against dwindling food supplies and other resources.

Guardians of the great dream of a relentless progress to higher economic levels were stung into bitter reply. The men of Vogt's view were denounced as crazy alarmists who failed to understand the world's potentialities. The argument still rages. It may fairly be said that it is not settled. It may also be said that the economic optimists, for all the vigor of their convictions, have not yet answered satisfactorily some of the critical questions involved.

They contend, for instance, that important scientific advances will enable man to replenish exhausted soils and thus actually increase his food potential. But they seldom bother to point out that many of these advances, if not all, are vastly more expensive to introduce and develop than was the simple task of drawing nourishment from originally rich top soils. Again and again, this cost problem tends to be ignored by the anti-global economic thinkers.

Even more crucially, they usually gloss over the fact that where technical advances are introduced, too often the gains are not translated into higher standards for the existing population. Most commonly, they are used to provide a broader base to support more people at absolute minimum levels. In other words, the population rises as the food supply permits. Obviously this affords no relief whatsoever.

Lately the United Nations and other world agencies have been giving considerable attention to population problems. But it would be heartening to see the issue lifted from the backwaters of obscure committees and thrust into the limelight where it belongs.

The European Recovery Program came to its official end with the turn of the year. Amid the many other affairs of the hour, the event was scarcely observed by Americans, who if they noticed at all probably reflected merely that the E.R.P. had given way to a more costly project—the mutual security program under the Atlantic Pact. For most European nations the shift in emphasis from economic to military recovery had already occurred, and the official death of E.R.P. was but a formality.

Swiss mountain guides, we note by the news, are finding business so bad that the government has begun to pay them a subsidy to prevent the profession from becoming extinct. People must be learning to find their own way around.

'These Days'

By GEORGE SOKOLSKY

PATRONAGE VS. MORALITY

The President's statement on the reorganization of the Internal Revenue Bureau begins with a remarkable preamble:

"After extensive study of the matter with Secretary of the Treasury, I have decided to institute a sweeping reorganization of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. This reorganization is part of a program to prevent improper conduct in the public service, to protect the government from the insidious influence peddlers and favor seekers, and to expose and punish any wrongdoers."

This was given to our country on January 2, 1952. The Hoover Commission report on the identical subject, making similar recommendations, was issued on March 5, 1949. The Hoover Commission was appointed on July 17, 1947, because there was obvious need for reform. Actually the need goes back decades.

The question then arises: Why was the Hoover Commission appointed at all? If one goes into it, is it possible to say that at the moment of appointment, the President sincerely desired an over-all reorganization of the executive branch of government. He invited Herbert Hoover to assist him and the original legislation creating the commission was of Herbert Hoover's design.

This commission consisted of appointees by the President, the Senate and the House of Representatives. It was strictly non-partisan. It included officials and private citizens. In addition, a large body of distinguished and able Americans, not actually on the commission, were co-opted for task forces. They did the investigating and the preparation of the basic task force reports on which the commission reached its conclusions.

From the very start Mr. Hoover encountered a measure of opposition and delay among those members who had developed a governmental philosophy supporting the widest expansion of governmental authority and the development of bureaucratic methods. This battle was fought steadily and often the questions at issue were placed before President Truman. It must be said here that the President supported the position of Herbert Hoover most often and seemed to show the keenest interest in the commission's work.

However, when the reports were out and public enthusiasm evident, only lip service was offered to the reforms. A Citizens Committee was organized under the chairmanship of Robert L. Johnson, president of Temple University, which has devoted itself to a propaganda for the implementation of the Hoover proposals. The effective opposition came not only from the White House and the bureaucracy, but also from members of Congress who favored patronage as a means to retaining their seats.

President Truman says:

"It is my intention to make the Bureau of Internal Revenue a blue-ribbon civil service career organization. I intend to make it a service in which all of us can place genuine confidence and have justified pride. I hope that I will have the full support of the Congress and of the public in bringing this about."

It is to be hoped that the President intends to do this. He could have done it long ago. His secretary of the treasury and his attorney general could have done it at any time since they were appointed to office. It is not only within their power, but it is their sworn duty to keep their personnel in order.

This is not a partisan question. Republicans are not more honest than Democrats because they belong to a different party. Actually, three factors are involved:

1. Patronage is a vicious system, utterly untenable by any argument. A public official, particularly a tax collector or a law enforcement officer, should not be beholden to a politician for his office or for continuance in office.

2. The bureaucracy has grown too large and is unmanageable. There are too many offices and bureaus and responsibilities have become diffused. Book-keeping methods are antiquated and clever men can find means for evading checks and protective devices. A private business would be bankrupted by the inefficiencies not only tolerated but encouraged in the management of public affairs.

All this is amply established in the Hoover reports.

3. The morals of public conduct reflect the decay of private morals. A shift from patronage to civil service, from Democrats to Republicans, will not suffice unless the people themselves demand and insist upon a moral approach to a public responsibility.

Criticizing "mink coats" is not the answer. For by any law of life, if there are givers, there will be takers. Human frailty can always be found and depended upon. It is up to the people to show their moral indignation at and intolerance of corruption—not only money corruption, but subversion and falsehood as well.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

THE DELIRIOUS PATIENT

When a patient becomes delirious, the family may or may not consider the condition to be serious.

In The American Journal of Psychiatry, Dr. M. Levin makes a plea to stop looking upon delirium as something esoteric (for trained psychiatrists only). He believes that delirium is probably still the commonest of all mental symptoms. It appears often in infections and hence appears frequently in general hospitals. Every delirious patient is disorientated (confused). In addition, he is apt to be dull, sluggish, restless, inattentive, fearful, excited and disturbed by nightmare-like fancies and hallucinations. It is important to note that the symptoms may shift rapidly and may even go away for a time so that clear or lucid intervals are common. Symptoms are often worse at night, disturbing sleep.

These symptoms of delirium are often, but not always, due to a poisoning of the blood, clearing up when the condition causing the poisoning (toxemia) is corrected.

Dr. Levin states that in the warding off and cure of infections by our physicians we may expect to see more and more cases of delirium in older people.

Another point brought out by Dr. Levin is that the idea that the abrupt withdrawal of drugs and especially alcohol brings on delirium or helps to cause delirium is not true. In delirium caused by drugs it is advisable to discontinue the drug abruptly and completely. This will come as a surprise to addicts and some physicians also. It is also unwise to use in treatment any drug that in itself can cause delirium. Dr. Levin believes that the use of bromides and the barbiturates in delirium is foolhardy and that paraldehyde (a quieting drug) is the only drug to use in such cases. Other psychiatrists may not agree with this view.

In his book, "Fundamentals of Psychiatry," Dr. Edward A. Strecker, professor of psychiatry, University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, outlines the treatment of delirium.

"In general, protection of the patient, food, rest, increased fluid intake and removal of toxins (poisons) and wastes, paraldehyde as above mentioned, high vitamin and high starch diet (the intravenous use of 50 per cent glucose). Large quantities of orange juice should be given."

Delirious patients should be watched carefully and malingering (acting delirious) should be kept in mind. The malingerer, although he will throw himself around, will be careful not to hurt himself.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington—Though the future of England depends to some extent on the Churchill-Truman conferences, there will be two groups of people watching the Churchill conferences just as intently as the British. They are:

The master-planners inside the Kremlin.

The leaders of western Europe—the French, Belgians, Dutch, Italians, whose farms and factories have been fought over for centuries.

Both groups will be watching for the same reason: to see if President Truman is able to win Churchill over to European unity; or whether the reverse happens and a new Anglo-American alliance is superimposed on top of the North Atlantic Pact as its domineering directors.

If the latter happens, there will be joy in the Kremlin and sorrow in western Europe.

But if the former happens, and Churchill is won over to a United States of Europe, there will be much gnashing of teeth in the Kremlin and much joy in western Europe.

The Communists argue that Europe's only salvation is unity under the Soviet. More advanced west European leaders, such as French Foreign Minister Schuman and Count Storza of Italy, argue that to offset this there must be European unity—not under Russia—but in cooperation with England and the U.S.A.

Those are the arguments that some administration advisers have put up in backstage discussions.

Divide and Rule

In contrast, here is what the British have done to oppose European unity:

Divide and Rule — Traditional British policy has been to balance the two strongest continental nations against each other—usually France against Germany. Inevitably this leads to war.

Invasion of the Ruhr — Best illustration of how British aloofness encourages war took place on March 7, 1936, when Hitler invaded the Ruhr. All that day the French Cabinet sat, telephoning to London, asking a pledge of British support if the French Army stepped in to block the Nazis. But London refused a commitment, and with the vital iron and coal fields of the Ruhr in Hitler's hands, war then became only a matter of time.

After the war, German officers told U. S. examiners how Hitler had given the invading Ruhr army two sets of orders—one to advance; the other to retreat in case of French resistance.

Union with France — In June 1940 when England feared for its life and needed even an occupied France as a partner, Churchill sent an impassioned plea to French Premier Reynaud:

"At this most fateful moment in the history of the modern world, the governments of the United Kingdom and the French Republic make this declaration of indissoluble union. The two governments declare that France and Great Britain shall no longer be two nations, but one Franco-British Union..."

That was how far Churchill was willing to go in 1940.

Ten years later when the French urged, begged, implored British cooperation in the Schuman Plan for the cooperative ownership of that age-old cause of war—the Ruhr—Britain refused.

That is why so many Europeans are watching the Churchill-Truman talks. That is also why so many of them believe there can be no permanent peace in Europe until Britain dispels the ancient myth that the English Channel separates them from Europe and realizes that England is in fact a continental nation.

Churchill and Truman Are Described as Living in Dream World

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Jan. 7—Prime Minister Churchill and President Truman, if the advance notices of the things they are to talk about are to be accepted, are living in a dream world. It's a world in which the heads of two governments still think they can plan agreements for allocation of raw materials or for economic adjustments on the assumption that peaceful co-existence with Communism is feasible.

Mr. Truman, for example, is actually thinking of cutting military expenditures this year, which means curtailment of American air power at a critical moment when air power is the primary need for defense and offense. Likewise, the whole attitude here and in Britain toward the Korean situation is that, once a truce is established there, the continent of Asia will be relatively quiet.

What both Mr. Truman and Mr. Churchill, outwardly at least, decline to concede is that the ball isn't in their hands at all, that the initiative still is with Soviet Russia and that move after move is being made by the Communists as the western powers flounder in bewilderment.

An instance of this is the effect produced by Vishinsky's speech at the United Nations Assembly. He hints broadly at trouble in southeast Asia. Whether it is a threat or a forecast of a new Soviet move, he suddenly asks that the armistice negotiations in Korea be taken over by the United Nations. Nobody in official quarters is able to figure out the meaning of this or any other move the Soviets make for the simple reason that almost everybody in top officialdom refuses to be realistic about the behavior of the Russians. Wishful thinking dominates almost every action or every statement of comment on this side.

What isn't accepted is that the Communists have completely bluffed the western powers into appeasement when there isn't the slightest justification for running away from the Russian threats.

British and American governments see the importance of taking the initiative from the Russians and starting tactics of infiltration and counter-attack to elements behind the Iron Curtain, the sooner the Russians will come to terms. It is a calculated risk that could mean big war but the inevitability of such a war under the present drift of events grows clearer with each bold act of the Communists.

Firm action can stop the limited wars but weak policies will prolong the tension and bring incidents that will make large-scale war unavoidable. Mr. Churchill used to be a realist.

POPULATION-VS.-FOOD PROBLEM

The free world and the Communist realm are battling on many fronts. Listening to utterances from leaders on both sides, you would almost inevitably conclude that the issues between them are deep and basic. To a very substantial degree they are, but there are also times when a man from Mars, viewing the cold war struggle with full objectivity, could not help but feel that the two great adversaries were grappling on a superficial level—dealing with symptoms rather than causes.

A review of the world's population statistics would be likely to put a celestial visitor in such a mood. Several European nations are groaning under the steadily greater weight of increased population. Asiatic countries, particularly India, continue to add to their teeming millions. Even the United States looks ahead to a sharply higher human total in the next two or three decades.

If statesmen were complete realists, the cold war would end tomorrow and in its place would begin a gigantic joint effort of East and West to solve this problem of overpopulation. For the swelling statistics are a matter of grave import. They are a cause, not a symptom. They bring in their train a thousand other difficulties.

A few years ago a controversial debate arose in the United States over this issue. William Vogt of the Pan-American Union in Washington dramatized the problem in a book called "The Road to Survival." It painted a gloomy picture of rising populations set against dwindling food supplies and other resources.

Guardians of the great dream of a relentless progress to higher economic levels were stung into bitter reply. The men of Vogt's view were denounced as crazy alarmists who failed to understand the world's potentialities. The argument still rages. It may fairly be said that it is not settled. It may also be said that the economic optimists, for all the vigor of their convictions, have not yet answered satisfactorily some of the critical questions involved.

They contend, for instance, that important scientific advances will enable man to replenish exhausted soils and thus actually increase his food potential. But they seldom bother to point out that many of these advances, if not all, are vastly more expensive to introduce and develop than was the simple task of drawing nourishment from originally rich top soils. Again and again, this cost problem tends to be ignored by the anti-gloom economic thinkers.

Even more crucially, they usually gloss over the fact that where technical advances are introduced, too often the gains are not translated into higher standards for the existing population. Most commonly, they are used to provide a broader base to support more people at absolute minimum levels. In other words, the population rises as the food supply permits. Obviously this affords no relief whatsoever.

Lately the United Nations and other world agencies have been giving considerable attention to population problems. But it would be heartening to see the issue lifted from the backwaters of obscure committees and thrust into the limelight where it belongs.

The European Recovery Program came to its official end with the turn of the year. Amid the many other affairs of the hour, the event was scarcely observed by Americans, who if they noticed at all probably reflected merely that the E.R.P. had given way to a more costly project—the mutual security program under the Atlantic Pact. For most European nations the shift in emphasis from economic to military recovery had already occurred, and the official death of E.R.P. was but a formality.

Swiss mountain guides, we note by the news, are finding business so bad that the government has begun to pay them a subsidy to prevent the profession from becoming extinct. People must be learning to find their own way around.

'These Days'

By GEORGE SOKOLSKY

PATRONAGE VS. MORALITY

The President's statement on the reorganization of the Internal Revenue Bureau begins with a remarkable preamble:

"After extensive study of the matter with the Secretary of the Treasury, I have decided to institute a sweeping reorganization of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. This reorganization is part of a program to prevent improper conduct in the public service, to protect the government from the insidious influence peddlers and favor seekers, and to expose and punish any wrongdoers."

This was given to our country on January 2, 1952. The Hoover Commission report on the identical subject making similar recommendations, was issued on March 5, 1949. The Hoover Commission was appointed on July 17, 1947, because there was obvious need for reform. Actually the need goes back decades.

The question then arises: Why was the Hoover Commission appointed at all? If one goes into that, it is possible to say that at the moment of appointment, the President sincerely desired an overall reorganization of the executive branch of government. He invited Herbert Hoover to assist him and the original legislation creating the commission was of Herbert Hoover's designing.

This commission consisted of appointees by the President, the Senate and the House of Representatives. It was strictly non-partisan. It included officials and private citizens. In addition, a large body of distinguished and able Americans, not actually on the commission, were co-opted for task forces.

They did the investigating and the preparation of the basic task force reports on which the commission reached its conclusions.

From the very start, Mr. Hoover encountered a measure of opposition and delay among those members who had developed a governmental philosophy supporting the widest expansion of governmental authority and the development of bureaucratic methods. This battle was fought steadily and often the questions at issue were placed before President Truman. It must be said here that the President supported the position of Herbert Hoover most often and seemed to show the keenest interest in the commission's work.

However, when the reports were out and public enthusiasm evident, only lip service was offered to the reforms. A Citizens Committee was organized under the chairmanship of Robert L. Johnson, president of Temple University, which has devoted itself to a propaganda for the implementation of the Hoover proposals. The effective opposition came not only from the White House and the bureaucracy, but also from members of Congress who favored patronage as a means to retaining their seats.

President Truman says:

"It is my intention to make the Bureau of Internal Revenue a blue-ribbon civil service career organization. I intend to make it a service in which all of us can place genuine confidence and have justified pride. I hope that I will have the full support of the Congress and of the public in bringing this about."

It is to be hoped that the President intends to do this. He could have done it long ago. His secretary of the treasury and his attorney general could have done it at any time since they were appointed to office. It is not only within their power, but it is their sworn duty to keep their personnel in order.

This is not a partisan question. Republicans are not more honest than Democrats because they belong to a different party. Actually, three factors are involved:

1. Patronage is a vicious system, utterly untenable by any argument. A public official, particularly a tax collector or a law enforcement officer, should not be beholden to a politician for his office or for continuance in office.

2. The bureaucracy has grown too large and is unmanageable. There are too many offices and bureaus and responsibility has become diffused. Book-keeping methods are antiquated and clever men can find means for evading checks and protective devices. A private business would be bankrupted by the inefficiencies not only tolerated but encouraged in the management of public affairs.

All this is amply established in the Hoover reports.

3. The morals of public conduct reflect the decay of private morals. A shift from patronage to civil service from Democrats to Republicans will not suffice unless the people themselves demand and insist upon a moral approach to public responsibility.

Criticizing "mink coats" is not the answer. For by any law of life, if there are givers, there will be takers. Human frailty can always be found and depended upon. It is up to the people to show their moral indignation at and intolerance of corruption—not only money corruption, but subversion and falsehood as well.

THE DELIRIOUS PATIENT

When a patient becomes delirious, the family may or may not consider the condition to be serious.

In the American Journal of Psychiatry, Dr. M. Levin makes a plea to stop looking upon delirium as something esthetic (for trained psychiatrists only). He believes that delirium is probably still the commonest of all mental symptoms. It appears often in infections and hence appears frequently in general hospitals. Every delirious patient is disoriented (confused). In addition, he is apt to be dull, sluggish, restless, inattentive, fearful, excited and disturbed by nightmare-like fancies and hallucinations. "It is important to note that the symptoms may shift rapidly and may even go away for a time so that clear or lucid intervals are common." Symptoms are often worse at night, disturbing sleep.

These symptoms of delirium are often, but not always, due to a poisoning of the blood, clearing up when the condition causing the poisoning (toxemia) is corrected.

Dr. Levin states that in the warding off and cure of infections by our physicians we may expect to see more and more cases of delirium in older people.

Another point brought out by Dr. Levin is that the idea that the abrupt withdrawal of drugs and especially alcohol brings on delirium or helps to cause delirium is not true. In delirium caused by drugs, it is advisable to discontinue the drug abruptly and completely. This will come as a surprise to addicts and some physicians also. Thus, the French steel industry was rebuilt to compete with the Belgian steel industry and with the steel industry of every other country. toms barriers.

Eisenhower has been trying to get North Atlantic Pact nations to pool their war industry as well as their armaments. Thus, each could make a specific weapon instead of all competing against each other in making the same weapon. So far his success has been limited.

Moscow's best argument is that Europe cannot go back to its old patchwork system of small, rival countries and survive. Europeans know that in this at least the Communists speak the truth. Europe knows this is true as Detroit knows it could not survive if it were permitted to sell automobiles in Michigan only; just as Pittsburgh knows it could not survive if its steel markets were restricted to Pennsylvania.

The Communists argue that Europe's only salvation is unity under the Soviet. Air Force Officer's BrideMRS. ALBERT H. MIRICK, 2nd*Good Taste Today*by Emily Post*(Author of 'Etiquette,' 'Children Are People,' etc.)*GIRL SITS ON RIGHT OF MAN

A rule of courtesy that was taken very seriously yesterday but with increasing lightness today is described as follows: "I read in the paper sometime ago a letter from a man who complained about things girls did that irritated him. One of them was having to climb over a girl when getting into a taxi. In other words, the girl got in first, naturally, and then instead of sitting farthest from the door, she sat next to the door, obliging the man to climb over her. A friend of mine defended this action by saying, 'No nice girl ever sits on a man's left, but always on the right.' I contend that while that may apply on formal occasions, the natural and courteous thing to do when entering a cab is to take the seat farthest from the door so that the man does not have to climb over the girl. Will you give us your opinion?"

Because of a long established tradition, a certain prejudice still remains against seating a lady on a gentleman's left. Therefore, a lady entering a taxi instinctively takes the place on the right and there is certainly plenty of space in a taxi for him to pass without any difficulty. If they were sitting in a convertible, the narrowness of the space would excuse the breaking of this rule. (Of course, if they enter the left-hand side of a car, there is no problem.)

Use of 'Informals'

Dear Mrs. Post: I received a box of double fold cards ("Informals," I believe they are called) for a Christmas present. These are larger than my ordinary visiting card, with my name engraved across the face. Will you please tell me just when I may use such cards?

Answer: They are intended for longer invitations and messages which would not fit on an ordinary visiting card. Those whose handwriting is large find them especially convenient. In other words, they can be used as substitutes for note paper.

Marking Baby Present

Dear Mrs. Post: When having an item of silver for a young baby marked with only one initial, should it be the first initial or the child's first name?

Answer: The initial of the child's first name.

Should a lady offer her hand when greeting friends or being introduced? Mrs. Post is sorry she cannot answer personal mail. However, her leaflet F-17, "Introductions," answers these questions fully. To obtain a copy, send 10 cents in coin to her, c/o The Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.

"It's a mighty good book," said a publisher speaking of one of his own publications, to Upton Sinclair. "Have you read it? What do you think of it?"

"There is only one thing to be said in its favor," said Mr. Sinclair. "A friend of mine carried it through the war in his breast pocket. A bullet ricochetted against his ribs, but the book saved him. The bullet was unable to get beyond the 4th chapter."

Kindness is not a passive acceptance of wrong and stupidity; it is paying hate with love, and greed with the joy of giving; it is turning fear into caution, resistance into co-operation, ignorance into intelligence, and irritation into benediction.

A country couple visited the Chicago Art Institute and in the Egyptian room gazed at a mummy which hung a card on which was printed "97 B. C."

Hiram—I don't rightly know, but like as not it's the number of the car that killed him.

The Weekly Shave

By FRANK TRIPP

When the conversation lags just mention your pet razor. Referring to men of course, for conversation seldom lags among women. Men agree on razors no more often than women agree on permanents. They're considerably set in their way where hacking off the beard is concerned; can get quite het up about razors.

The most stubborn of the species is that rare bird who still uses the old-fashioned snee type. You'll have a search to find an old-time folding razor outside barber shops but when you do find one don't try to get a good word for the safety razor from its owner.

No man under 70 can have much idea of what it meant in time and effort to keep clean-shaven before King Gillette brought forth the first safety razor around 1900. Nor would he believe that up to that time the "five o'clock shadow" was well nigh a permanent black-out on the physiognomy of masculine America.

To this day only one man in seven shaves every day. Back then it must have been less than one in a thousand; and there were good reasons. Most important was the physical hazard involved. Those who could shave themselves without leaving gashes and scars were almost as rare as one who could cut his own hair.

Thus shaving which now is a side issue of barbing, once was a main function of the barber: so much so that many shops would cut no hair on Saturdays or days preceding holidays. Every popular barber shop stayed open until midnight on those days and from noon till closing was populated by long rows of gabby males who read the Police Gazette, hashed over the local gossip, started some more on its way and had a few remarks to make about each customer after he walked out with his weekly shave. The barber shop was a local forum of some consequence, the passing of which had a sobering effect on community life, even in larger cities.

IN SOME SHOPS shaving was on a production line basis. To speed things up there were latherers who did nothing else, usually apprentices learning the trade. The customer stripped himself of coat, collar, cuffs and tie. Attached collars and cuffs as yet were only on heavy work shirts. The lather made a real event of it: not to get a tip, for the whole shave was only a dime: 15 cents in swank places.

He lathered lavishly, kept the customer awake and entertained until a barber was free at another chair. Then the barber approached with brandishing razor, stropped it to the rhythm of "Yankee Doodle," told the lowdown left him by his last customer and did his stuff, either "once over light," or

SO SATURDAY became the one night in the week when the average swain looked bridegroomish. When you plan that flossy wedding for your young fry and feel you must have it on Saturday, your ardor may lessen to know how Saturday got popular as a wedding day. Well, here you have it; it was bath and shave day, and pretty important too, if was pay day.

Historically, shaving was no invention of the moderns. It goes back centuries B.C., when pagans shaved face or head into weird or identifying designs. They first used the sharp edges of broken shells.

I've been wondering where I could get hold of some of those shells. I bought one of King Gillette's first razors and seems as if I've tried every blade that's come on the market in the past half century. There are good ones, but some of 'em I'd like to compare with King Tut's pet shell.

Ranger Rookie Begins to Click

(By The Associated Press) Jack (Elbows) Stoddard, tall, est forward in the National Hockey League is beginning to payoff on an estimated $30,000 investment by the surging New York Rangers.

Stoddard, imported recently from Providence of the American League for players valued in the neighborhood of $30,000, scored the first goal of his brief big league career last night to give the Rangers a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks.

The six-foot three-inch right winger scored in the third period to break a 2-2 tie and climax an uphill battle that saw the Rangers wipe out a 2-0 deficit.

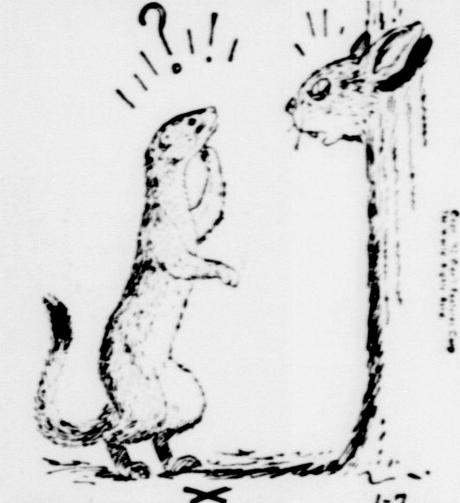

Stoddard, only player in the league to wear uniform number 13, took a pass from center Edgar Laprade inside the Chicago blue line and whipped the game winning goal home before he was sent crashing into the boards on the right hand side of the net.

The triumph enabled the Rangers to extend their fourth place margin over the Boston Bruins to three points. The Bruins dropped a 4-2 decision to the league-leading Red Wings in Detroit.

Ted Lindsay, hot tempered left winger, scored twice in the last period and Vic Stasius once to give the Wings the edge.

Lindsay and Boston's Bill Ezicki enlivened the third period with a fist fight. The two stormy petrels were suspended last season for a spell following a bruising brawl in Detroit.

Yanks Again Picked As Team of the Year

New York, Jan. 7 (AP)—For the second straight year, the New York Yankees baseball club was picked as the team of the year in the annual Associated Press poll.

"An estimate made by the Chamber of Commerce," said Kurdt, "indicates that the bowling tournament alone will bring about $250,000 worth of new business into our city."

"Although some persons believe that the alleys, hotels, restaurants and wholesale food distributors get all of this business," he continued, "the Chamber would like to point out that transportation agencies, gas stations and stores get their share."

Everybody Benefits

"In fact, he went on, "the additional payroll created makes it possible for some people to buy more things than they want, pay for professional services, food bills, in fact for any necessities of life. The entire community benefits thereby."

Other excerpts from Kurdt's statement:

"Conventions, particularly large conventions like the New York State bowling championships, are a very important factor in the economic life of our city. A widespread recognition of their importance is shown by the support conventions are receiving and the enthusiastic reception given the visitors by the people of Kingston."

"The Chamber of Commerce believes that a continuation and expansion of this splendid public attitude makes people want to come back to our city. There is a very apparent desire on the part of our citizens to tell the rest of the world how wonderful our city really is and that we have many assets about which we can boast."

Help in Housing

Kurd pointed out that the Chamber is cooperating with the tournament committee in housing arrangements for the some 8,000 to 10,000 bowlers and families expected to visit Kingston next spring. The bowlers are being asked to make their own reservations for rooms, but the Chamber will help find accommodations for them if they cannot make reservations at the place of their choice.

"Another important reason for the entire community joining to give our visitors a hearty reception is that they talk about Kingston when they get back home," Kurdt continued. "Numerous instances of fine publicity have been called to our attention because of the fine welcome received by the women bowlers of the state in 1950. Favorable publicity is still forthcoming."

All this indicated that conventions are good for our city and that the reception our visitors receive from all persons, they contact is very important, Kurdt concluded.

Representatives of the state tourney committee will be at all bowling alleys during the week to make brief speeches to the bowlers. Entry blanks and all pertinent data regarding the tournament will be available.

Series Opener With Newburgh Scheduled Friday

Pennant Hopes to Get Big Test This Week

The DUSO League's dramatic basketball race resumes Tuesday night after a holiday layoff, with several important games scheduled this week.

Kingston High's pennant hopes will be severely tested in road engagements Tuesday in Fallsburg and Friday in Newburgh.

Three teams are undefeated at this stage of the pennant chase. Newburgh has reeled off four straight victories, while Fallsburg and Kingston are unsullied in three outings.

A split for the week would leave Coach G. Warren Kias' Maroons in a strong position. A double loss would force them to play perfect ball on their home court in the latter stages of the campaign.

Newburgh is scheduled at home both times this week, on Tuesday with Poughkeepsie and on Friday with Kingston.

Fallsburg, the third contender, will be in Monticello and plenty of trouble on Friday.

The week's schedule:

Tuesday, Jan. 8
KINGSTON at Fallsburg
Poughkeepsie at Newburgh
Beacon at Ellenville

Friday, Jan. 11
KINGSTON at Newburgh
Poughkeepsie at Middletown
Ellenville at Liberty
Port Jervis at Beacon
Fallsburg at Monticello

Lineup Intact

The Kingston eagles were spotty in early season engagements but managed to come through with the baskets when needed. They showed a tendency toward excessive fouling in their first two games but curbed that weakness in their third and fourth outings.

Coach Kias finished the pre-holiday phase of the campaign with a starting array that featured Leroy Hooker, the DUSO's leading scorer, and Don Madison at forwards; Frank "Yip" Koeng, center; and Charlie Tiano and Pete Camp in the backcourt. Don Murphy is the first alternate.

Meantime, the race for the Western division title became closer as Minneapolis' Lakers picked up two victories while Rochester was splitting. The Lakers measured Indianapolis Saturday and then knocked off the New York Knicks 107-72 last night for their greatest scoring spurge of the season. Jim Pollard led the scoring with 32 and George Mikan added 25 more. Rochester beat Philadelphia Saturday.

All this indicated that conventions are good for our city and that the reception our visitors receive from all persons, they contact is very important, Kurdt concluded.

Representatives of the state tourney committee will be at all bowling alleys during the week to make brief speeches to the bowlers. Entry blanks and all pertinent data regarding the tournament will be available.

Celtics and Nats In Pro Cage Tie

(By The Associated Press)

The Eastern division of the National Basketball Association couldn't be any tighter with the Boston Celtics and the Syracuse Nats deadlocked for first place today, each with 19 victories and 13 defeats.

The Celtics won two games over the weekend and Syracuse one to create the tie. Boston first beat Baltimore Saturday night and then turned back the pace setting Rochester led the pack of the Western division 91-80 last night. Syracuse's triumph was a 98-93 decision over Philadelphia's Warriors last night.

Bob Cousy was the big factor in the Celtics' triumph over Rochester. He made 16 assists—one short of the league record—and scored 15 points, second only to Ed Macauley's 22.

The Nats built up a 53-39 lead at the half and needed the margin as the Warriors rallied in the last two sessions. Dolf Schayes contributed 26 points to Syracuse's total.

SPOORTS

By CHARLES J. TIANO
Freeman Sports Editor

It takes a young man of noble character to speak as freely with the press and radio as did Big Ed Weaver upon his return from West Point.

By now, you should know the Weaver story, backward and forward.

It is a tale of rumors, innuendoes, suspicion, exaggerations about an athletically talented youth who brought considerable publicity to the city.

Having been "turned back" by the U. S. Military Academy, Big Ed, a term which implies that he has lost credit for his "junior" year, is thus eligible to return to West Point with the new class on Aug. 25. He starts over as a junior and has left two years of basketball eligibility and one in football.

Big Ed spoke calmly over the telephone. "I just want to get my side of the story across to the public," he said in a well modulated voice.

"I have always felt that West Point is for me and I am determined to get back on Aug. 25 and complete my career there."

"About those rumors?" he added. "They were pure hogwash. Everybody at the Point treated me swell. I left many friends down there who will be glad to see me return. I was extremely pleased at the interest many of the top officials showed in my case. They all wished me the best and expressed the hope that I would return."

Queried about rumors that he had been "ostracized" by the football squad and given the "freeze" by the cadet corps, Eddie answered emphatically:

"That's pure hokum. When the story about my being ostracized broke, the Cadet Honor Committee came to my rescue quickly. I did not even have to present my case to the committee; they did it on their own."

"My relations with Coach Earl Blaik and the varsity football players were pleasant all the time. It can't be any other way at the Point."

The man observed that some folks had made much capital of the fact that the Army passer had not thrown too many aerials in his direction in the Army football opener last fall.

"That was a pure co-incidence," he said, "as a matter of fact I don't have to tell you that we didn't have much passing last year. Consequently, we had to do most of the gaining along the ground."

The former All-DUSO and KHS athletic star made no reference to the cribbing scandal. It is now historic fact that he was one of two cadet football players who survived.

That statement in itself is a misnomer. There is no necessity to "survive" anything in which you have never been involved. It is to Big Ed's everlasting credit that he played the game strictly above aboard, on the athletic field and in the class rooms where he had more than his share of difficulties.

In revealing that he had passed two or three makeup examinations, Weaver pointed out that he would not have to take the third one over again. Nor, of course, would he be compelled to take a re-entrance examination in August.

"I also want to express my thanks to the many friends who gave me encouragement and support when those rumors were flying," he went on. "It was nice to know that my home town folks and friends were interested in my career. When I return the third year should be easier; since I've had most of the stuff, and I'm sure I will make the grade."

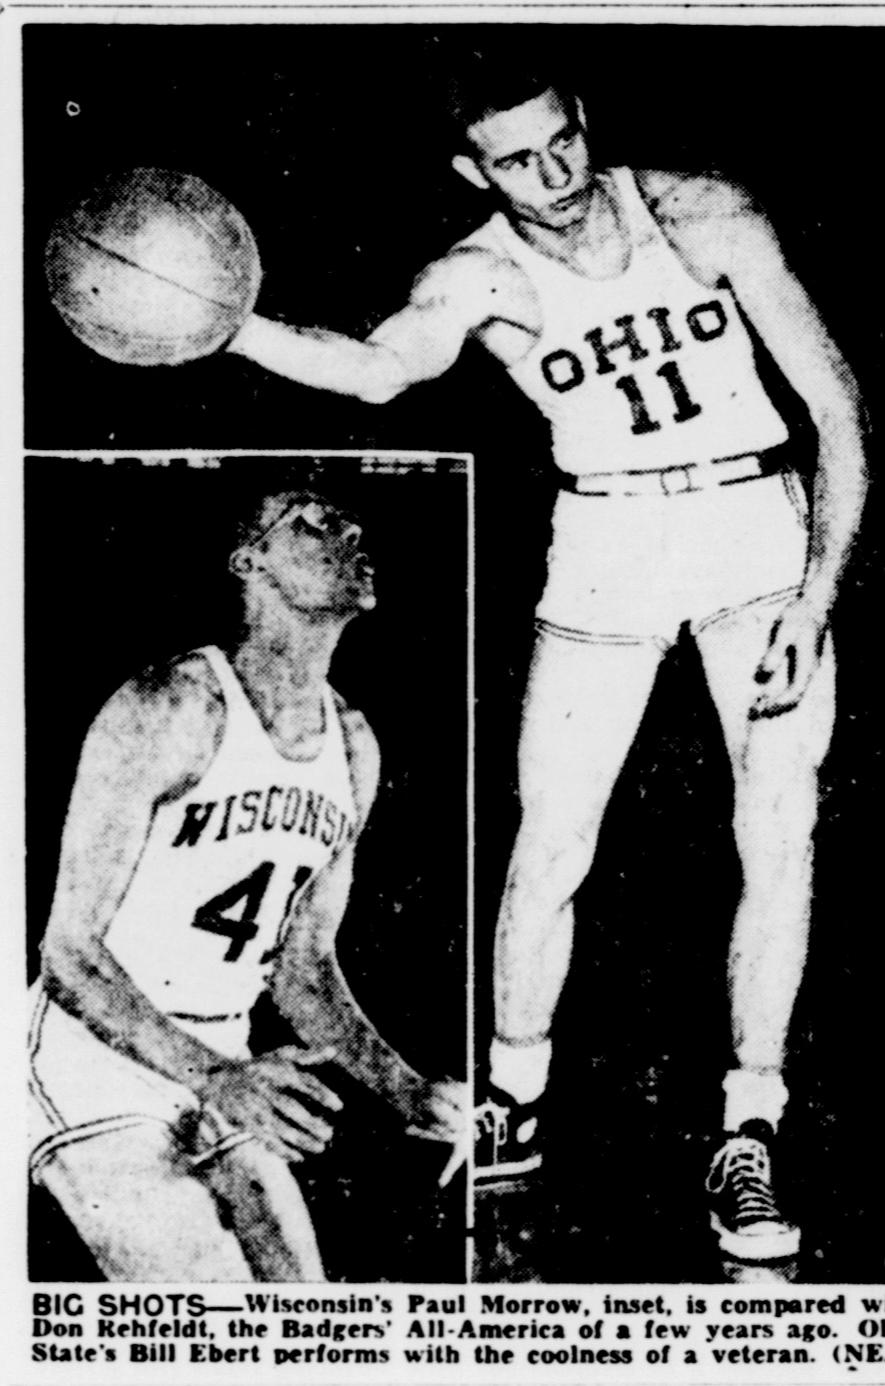

About his future athletic intentions at the Point?

"I have a year of football eligibility left, but, frankly, I may have a lot of trouble trying to reclaim my old job."

About basketball, he felt more secure, naturally.

You have to root for a guy like that."

Evashevski New Coach at Iowa

Iowa City, Ia., Jan. 7 (UPI)—Forest Evashevski, a teacher of power football who calls his new job a "real challenge," last night was appointed head coach at the University of Iowa.

The Iowa Board of Control of Athletics named the 33-year-old former Michigan star as Leonard Raffensperger's successor within three hours after Evashevski's formal resignation was accepted by Washington State College at Pullman. He will report here Feb. 1.

Evashevski was given a five-

New York BA Bids For the 1955 ABC

The New York City Bowling Association will bid for the 1955 American Bowling Congress tournament, it was decided at a rally of bowling officials, proprietors and the press Sunday at the Park Sheraton Hotel in New York.

New York has been host to only one previous tournament, in 1937.

Dick Howard, author of three "700" triples in the last two weeks, continued to make bowling news with a big 279 solo in last night's session of the Ferraro Mixed League.

A stinging 10-pin "tap" in the ninth frame robbed him of a possible "300" score. He threw eight straight perfect pocket shots before he ran into the stubborn 10-pin.

Howard sandwiched the 279 between solos of 160 and 195 for a 534 series that led the league by a good margin.

Rumruper Chris Backman posted 215-357 and "Pop" Auchmoody shot 211-570. Other top scorers were Adabelle Marke 209-549; John Covey 212-546; Jim Strubel 212-538; Rudy Hohenberger 521; Fred Schussler 500; Bill Lawrence 496.

Peter Keresman and Charles J. Tiano, life members of the Kingston Bowling Association attended.

Foe's Heavy Hand Spells Trouble

By OSWALD JACOBY

Written for NEA Service

When the opponents have won the first discard pile your object is to meld out if you can. You are especially anxious to get out of a bad position by melding out if one of the opponents has a very large number of cards in his hand. You cannot fight against such heavy artillery, so you must seek safety in flight.

The need to run away is not so acute when your position is almost as good as that of the opponents. This will be the case when one of the opponents has picked up only a small-sized discard pile.

For example, suppose one of the opponents picks up a discard pile of eight cards and melds seven cards for his initial meld. After he has made his discard, he will have only eleven cards left in his hand.

This gives him no great advantage over you and your partner, for he has only the same number of cards in his hand that you have in yours.

In such a situation, you should not swerve too far from your original plan for your hand. If you had been intending to try for a fast meld-out, you should carry on with the build-up necessary for that purpose. If you had been intending to fight for the discard pile, you are still in position to do so.

When you are fighting for the discard pile in this position, make a dangerous discard at your first opportunity. This will give an opponent the chance to pick up a pile of two cards or four cards.

Such a pile will do him very little good, of course, so your dangerous discard is not really as dangerous as it looks.

If you can get by with one or two dangerous discards, you may be in position to discard more safely for the next round or two. By that time, if you had good reason to play for the discard pile, you may have a chance to pick up the pile yourself.

Q—When the stock pile is down very low; say to about a half dozen cards or so, it is permissible for a player to count the exact number of cards remaining and thus inform all of the players.

A—Yes. You have this right at your turn to play and also at your partner's turn if he asks you for permission to meld out. The right still applies no matter how many cards there are in the stock pile, but there isn't much reason to count until the pile gets fairly low.

The Mature Parent

How To Inspire Youth To Share in Community

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

My friend Bill J. is an engineer, a realist by nature as well as by profession. He is also the adored father of two young people, one in college and the other cruising around somewhere with the U. S. Navy.

One night last week I was dining with him and Jo. To a question I put to him, he said, "Anti-American propaganda? Sure, our kids were exposed to it in high school and college. Jo and I didn't mind. We know they've been immunized."

"How immunized?" I asked.

When Bill puts down his pipe, it's to say something he thinks is important. He put it down now and said, "Why do you think Sister worked without pay in a settlement house the Summer before last? Why do you think we encouraged Bill to donate his Friday nights to a downtown boys' club his last year in high school? Do you think we pushed those activities just so that we could be sure we could find the children when we wanted them?"

"No," I said.

"We wanted," the children's father said, reaching for his pipe, "to let the youngsters in on what their country is doing about 'social justice' and 'discrimination' so that when they heard their country labeled, they would have answers ready."

FEEDING YOUTH'S HUNGER FOR A NOBLE PURPOSE

Maybe my friend Bill has found the answer to the problem that has perplexed many of us who have watched newsreels unfold the bright dedicated faces of Nazi and Communist children.

Maybe he's found the way to help us all feed youth's hunger to feel part of a noble national purpose. For years we've fussed and fumed because we have not known how to make our American vision of brotherhood thrilling and powerful to our young people.

Like any other human hunger, the need to work for a noble purpose can go rancid and bad, if it is not fed. It can go sentimental and silly with dreams of world reform or go hostile and furious with demands for constant change.

Our psychiatrists know how urgent is this need. One of our leading ones writes:

"Young people with grandiose ideas of serving 'mankind' in the abstract need first to succeed in serving the people close around them in their families and neighborhoods. International amity does not begin in the United Nations. It begins at home. In families and neighborhoods alone can we develop the solid foundation that is essential for citizenship on higher levels."

Those are the words of Dr. George S. Stevenson, Medical Director of the National Association for Mental Hygiene.

So I have a suggestion to make. We have in our country what may well be the most remarkable system of public and private social service in the world. I want to suggest that our Boards of Education and Community Chests get together — and work out a plan to give academic credits to high school students in "social studies" classes who volunteer service to their communities' humanitarian agencies.

They represent our country's conscience, its sense of love and justice to the weary, the weak and the disabled. It's time our young people were directly involved in America's heroic battle against disease, despair and apathy. It is time we used it to inspire the youthful idealism which is our most precious and most neglected national asset. (All Rights Reserved, NEA Service, Inc.)

Egan Faces Trial, Commissioner Says

Hudson, N. Y., Jan. 7 (UPI)—A

Hudson police sergeant whose resignation was demanded in an ultimatum by the police commissioner will face a departmental trial.

Commissioner Roger C. Bliss said yesterday that charges against Sgt. William F. Egan would be preferred "at the earliest suitable date."

He did not specify the charges.

Bliss called Dec. 26 for the resignations of Egan and two city patrolmen after their names had figured in testimony in last month's state Crime Commission hearing on gambling and alleged protection pay-offs in Columbia county.

At that time, Bliss said the three policemen would have to resign by Jan. 6 or face departmental trial.

Two of the three later applied for retirement, the commissioner said. They were Patrolmen Jesse Haught and Arthur Finch.

Egan told a reporter he would "prefer a trial to resignation."

At a public hearing conducted by the Crime Commission two weeks ago, a state trooper testified he had seen Egan and Finch in a Hudson brothel when state police raided it June 23, 1950.

Another witness said he had seen Haught visit the operator of a numbers game.

As an aftermath of the commission's hearings, Governor Dewey ordered a special grand jury investigation into gambling and possible payoffs in the county. Hudson is the county seat.

Actress Massey Weds

New Rochelle, N. Y., Jan. 7 (UPI)—Actress Ilona Massey, holding an almost forgotten cluster of orchids, was married yesterday to Charles Walker, Manhattan jeweler. When the wedding party arrived for the ceremony, flowers had been forgotten. So a motorcycle policeman hurried to a nearby florist and returned with the orchids. Miss Massey, Hungarian born, was divorced from Alan Curtis in 1942. Her age was given as 39. Walker's as 36.

Will Ask Extension

An Albany, N. Y., Jan. 7 (UPI)—Governor Dewey will ask the Legislature to extend for another year the Emergency Housing Act under which the state has spent more than $500 million dollars since 1938 for low-rent projects.

Dewey will tell the lawmakers when they convene on July 1, 1953, that the extension to July 1, 1953, is necessary because defense restrictions have been hard on private construction in the last year.

Police Seek Bearded Rapist

Bay Shore, N. Y., Jan. 7 (AP)—Police looked today for a jittery, bearded man who knocked a 12-year-old girl from a bicycle and raped her in his car.

They said the attack occurred only 30 minutes after he had chased a 13-year-old girl, who outran him. It took place only about 10 miles from where a 14-year-old girl was slain last Nov. 29.

The rapist, police said, threw the child from her bicycle Saturday night, drove her to North Babylon and attacked her.

She told police that as he forced her from the car and drove away, he called out: "Pray for me."

Officers said she gave a full description of him and picked out two pictures from police files as possible suspects.

Cyril Donnelly, chief of police at Smithtown, told newsmen he thought possibly the rapist was the man who strangled Lyde Kitchener near Smithtown.
